WESTMINSTER. The twelfth Edition. Price 1s.

"Of the Contents of a Letter, which has commanded such general attention as to have arrived at the Eighth Edition, before we could have an opportunity of perusing it, few of our Readers can need to be informed. On the Illustrious Author, whose name will be dear to Britons as long as the True Principles of their Constitution are understood, and their most important rights continue to be valued, it is wholly unnecessary for us to attempt a panegyric.

MONTHLY REVIEW, Feb. 1793."

"Mr. Fox has made a solemn, and, we trust, not an ineffectual Appeal to his Constituents and the Nation at large. He expresses himself upon paper, as in debate, in a clear, manly, and perspicuous manner; and his language, unincumbered with flowers and figures, and his arguments, are at once logical and convincing."

COMPARATIVE DISPLAY of the DIFFERENT OPINIONS of the most Celebrated British Writers on the Subject of the FRENCH REVOLUTION. Elegantly printed in two large Volumes Royal 8vo. Price 18s. in boards.

The following Authors, among many others, are quoted in the above display. Mr. Burke, Mr. Paine, Mr. Christie, Dr. Priestley, Dr. Parr, Dr. Thomson, M. Dupont, Sir Brooke Boothby, Mr. M'Intosh, Mr. Barlow, Mr. Rous, Mr. Lof, Rev. Mr. Nares, Mrs. M'Aulay, Mrs. Wolfenecraft, &c. &c.

No event in the History of Mankind has produced such able discussions of the Principles of Government as the late Revolution in France; and, in a pre-eminent degree, from the talents of British Writers. But, so numerous have been the Publications on this important and interesting event, and so desultory has been the general form in which they have appeared, that it requires somewhat of a professional perseverance to read and digest the arguments and opinions contained in them. The universal complaint on this subject suggested a Comparative Display of the varying sentiments of the principal Writers of our own Country on the French Revolution; and it is now offered to the Publick as containing their opinions in that state of arrangement, which will relieve the toil of those who may be anxious to investigate whatever has been written on the subject, and meet the wishes of others who are alarmed at the labour of such an investigation.

* * * It is presumed that HENRY IV. will be better known in the Portrait given in this Work, than in the most voluminous and elaborate History: the Man, the Hero, the King, the Father of his People, will appear in every page; and perhaps this Method of exhibiting him hath the Merit of the departing little from the mode left us by Plutarch for writing the Lives of illustrious Men, and rendering them present to our View.
